Forty years ago, a small, intrepid group of volunteers gathered in the basement meeting room at St. John's Church in Peabody with the hope to one day be able to offer dying people social, emotional and spiritual support to enable them to die with dignity on their own terms. Over time, the group expanded to bring in representatives from the area's hospitals, visiting nurse associations, faith communities, community aging services, lawyers, and other committed community activists. Through many meetings and discussions in those first months, they recognized the need to create a formal structure and organization and they set out over the next year to develop bylaws and apply for non-profit status – and on June 1, 1979 Hospice of the North Shore (HNS) was officially born and became the second hospice to incorporate in Massachusetts.

Paul Lanzikos, now Executive Director of North Shore Elder Services, was chosen as the first President of the Board of Directors and as he recalls, the first few years were primarily focused on raising money and educating the community about this brand-new concept of hospice. After two years of giant yard sales and small fundraisers, HNS was able to hire an executive director who was tasked with recruiting and training volunteers. Bolstered by champions at the local hospitals, patient referrals trickled in and Paul estimates that by the mid-1980s they had probably assisted 50 patients a year. From these humble beginnings we are now the largest provider of hospice services in Massachusetts, caring for well over 5,000 patients annually.

Letter from the President

President and CEO Patricia Ahern said, “We are committed to creating a work environment that supports our mission and honors our organization’s values of compassion, excellence, collaboration, integrity, responsiveness and innovation. This recognition is especially meaningful as we celebrate our 40th year of providing hospice care to our community. I’m so proud to work with our employees who exemplify and live our mission and values every day.”

Care Dimensions Hospice House Makes an Impact

It has been almost five months since we opened the doors to our new Care Dimensions Hospice House (CDHH) in Lincoln. The project to build Care Dimensions’ second inpatient hospice facility began in 2013, with a goal to combine the comforts of home with the benefits of hospital-level hospice care. The new facility offers an alternative to hospitalization for patients who require specialized care for acute pain and symptom management and features 18 private patient suites, family gathering and dining spaces, a contemplation chapel and a garden of remembrance, to name a few. It is also a place where visitors are welcome 24 hours a day, including overnight guests and leashed pets. As of the middle of August, we have cared for 137 patients and welcomed hundreds of their families and visitors from around the country.

We are eternally grateful to all who contributed to the campaign to build the Care Dimensions Hospice House. As donor Daphne Hatsopoulos of Lincoln shared, “The Care Dimensions Hospice House in Lincoln is a facility that is both beautiful and peaceful. I am so pleased that this facility has finally opened to serve the MetroWest community and I’m proud to support this important organization and help them further their mission.”

“Care Dimensions is one of only eight hospices that made the list and the only one in New England. Reacting to this exciting announcement, President and CEO Patricia Ahern said, “We are committed to creating a work environment that supports our mission and honors our organization’s values of compassion, excellence, collaboration, integrity, responsiveness and innovation. This recognition is especially meaningful as we celebrate our 40th year of providing hospice care to our community. I’m so proud to work with our employees who exemplify and live our mission and values every day.”

Care Dimensions was named as one of Modern Healthcare magazine’s Best Places to Work in America. This news comes as the result of a survey that 83% of our staff participated in earlier in 2018. Care Dimensions is one of only eight hospices that made the list and the only one in New England. Reactions to this exciting announcement, President and CEO Patricia Ahern said, “We are committed to creating a work environment that supports our mission and honors our organization’s values of compassion, excellence, collaboration, integrity, responsiveness and innovation. PATIENT AND FAMILY ADVISORY COUNCIL HOLDS INAUGURAL MEETING

During National Patient Experience Week in April, Care Dimensions held the inaugural meeting of its newly formed Patient and Family Advisory Council (PFAC). Care Dimensions' PFAC comprises 12 family or community members and eight staff members who will collaboratively work on projects to enhance the patient and family care experience and identify key resources that will help patients and families better navigate hospice services. “We are not mandated to have a PFAC like hospitals are, but we wanted one now to enhance our commitment to innovation and providing the best patient care,” said Patricia Ahern, President and CEO. For more information, or to suggest a project for PFAC to consider, contact Amy Ciancarelli, patient and family relations coordinator, at 781-373-6604 or ACiancarelli@CareDimensions.org.

CREATING SUMMER FUN FOR A PEDIATRIC PATIENT

Family getaways and outdoor activities are all a part of summer, but for 10-month old Natalie and her family, getting outdoors and engaging in these special moments was an overwhelming challenge because of the medical equipment needed to help her breath. Natalie, a Care Dimensions’ pediatric hospice patient who was born with pulmonary hypoplasia, requires a BiPap machine to ensure optimal airflow to her lungs. To take Natalie on outings, she needed a double-size stroller to accommodate her medical equipment and special transportation to ensure her safe travel. After visiting with Natalie and her family for several months, Care Dimensions Child Life Coordinator Keyla Kelley, recognized that Natalie and her family could benefit from a bonding experience and found a great venue for such an outing: Dream Night, a free evening for children with chronic illnesses, at the Franklin Park Zoo in Boston. “I could tell the idea was exciting to Natalie’s mom, Elsy,” said Keyla. “But she said it would be impossible for them to get there on their own.” So, Keyla and hospice social worker, Wendy Paramore, set to work on a way to make Dream Night a reality for the family. They received free transportation from United Private Car in Boston and a donated double stroller from Baby’s A-Go, an equipment rental company. All of the vendors were pleased to donate to such a meaningful event, and when the van arrived to transport Natalie and her family there was even a special gift of dresses for Natalie from the transportation company. Once at the zoo, Natalie and her siblings were entertained by costumed Star Wars characters, playground rides and, of course, wild animals. “This was the best day of Natalie’s life, so far,” said her dad. “The whole time she was looking around at everything.”

In the nine months since she’s been a Care Dimensions’ patient, Natalie and her family have benefitted from home visits by a pediatric hospice nurse, social worker, child life specialist and music therapist. The zoo outing was just one of many examples of how hospice has helped improve Natalie's quality of life. Her parents are especially grateful to the team for their efforts to help them create this lasting memory. “We haven’t done anything like this before,” they said. “It was great to go out together and meet other parents with children like Natalie.” The photos from their special outing are already in an album as a keepsake.

CAMP STEPPING STONES 2018

On a perfect summer day in July, we welcomed 70 campers, 60 adults, and 75 volunteers to Camp Stepping Stones, the annual one-day experience for children and families who have lost someone close to them. The camp was held at the Glen Urquhart School in Beverly. Throughout the day, children created commemorative arts and crafts and tie-dyed shirts, enjoyed music, pet therapy, and yoga, and tried their skill at outdoor games or bungee bouncing. Parents, guardians, and grandparents attended workshops related to grief, loss, and self-care, and were treated to yoga, Reiki, and massage. “Our experience at Camp Stepping Stones was remarkable. From the bones of it - the planning, organization, and execution - to the kindness and encouragement of all staff and volunteers, it was an impressive and blessedly healing event. I made some new friends, shed a few tears, and shared many laughs. The kids thoroughly enjoyed the camp. My nephew (nearly 12) was pleasantly surprised by the atmosphere and tone. Kudos and gratitude to all for this experience!”

Resources from CareDimensions Grief Support Program

Caring for yourself while grieving

Over the past four years, Nancy Sheena Sarles has been leading Yoga for Living with Loss, a program she developed based on her personal grief experiences. The following is an excerpt from Nancy’s blog and serves to remind us of the importance of taking care of our physical, emotional and spiritual health while grieving.

In 2015, my best friend of 40 years, confident, and soul sister, Kayya, passed away from brain cancer. I was by her side and devastated by her death. Only three months later, my big sister Susie, who was my lifetime mentor, my idol, and the person who knew me best, succumbed to lung cancer. How was I to actually live without my big sister or my soul sister? I was bereft as these women I loved and cherished the most were not by my side as they had always been.

My yoga practice gave me the tools to embrace my journey of loss without getting lost. Being no stranger to grief, I drew on experiences to help me navigate through these fresh losses. I learned that we don’t ‘get over’ being in grief; it ebbs and flows through our hearts as we live with it for the rest of our lives. Yoga provides a sacred practice for our bodies to physically grieve, release tension, and live with our broken hearts, both physically and emotionally.

MAKING MEMORIES WITH HEARTBEAT RECORDINGS

“Photos are one way to preserve memories, but they’re one dimensional,” says Care Dimensions Creative Arts Therapy Coordinator Lisa Kynvi. “But a person’s voice and heartbeat are two things that can bring a deceased loved one back to their families in a very deep and meaningful way.” With this in mind, Care Dimensions is now offering the Heartbeats program for appropriate and interested patients and families. Patients’ heartbeats can be recorded and then incorporated into the song of their choice. To demonstrate the recording process, Lisa and the team recently recorded a song using her son Lars’ heartbeat. After capturing it with a small, wireless stethoscope recording device, his heartbeat was layered with guitar, fiddle, and harmonizing voices for the final version of the song. To view the process and hear the song, please visit CareDimensions.org/Heartbeats.

Complementary therapies, like music therapy, are made possible by generous donations from the community. Care Dimensions is currently seeking additional grant funding to support this innovative music therapy program to benefit our patients and their families.

PRESENTING

Frank Ostaseski, founder of the Metta Institute shares “What Being with Dying Can Teach the Living”

As part of our 40th anniversary celebration, Care Dimensions has invited Frank Ostaseski, an internationally respected Buddhist teacher and pioneer in end-of-life care, to speak at a free event open to healthcare professionals and the community. He is the 2018 recipient of the prestigious Humanities Award, from the American Academy of Hospice and Palliative Medicine. In this special presentation, Frank will weave together research and developed this pioneering opioid destruction pilot program.

In an effort to help curb the prevalence of opioids in our communities and to prevent them from being abused, Care Dimensions is piloting a program to assist our patients’ families with proper disposal of unused opioid medications. In this initial pilot program, one hospice team from our Waltham office is providing Takeaway Medication Recovery System packages to families for unused prescription medication. The system includes an easy-to-use, pre-paid postage envelope, that has a tracking number, which is mailed to a facility in Texas for destruction. Care Dimensions is tracking the usage of this program to determine its success and ease of use for families and caregivers, and is actively seeking grant funding to extend this critical service to all of our patients’ families.

In May, Care Dimensions recognized the members of the David Sherman Legacy Society, who have included Care Dimensions as part of their estate planning, and thanked them for their vision to annually support Care Dimensions’ mission so that other families will stay with us forever.” With this in mind, Care Dimensions is now piloting a program to assist our patients’ families with proper disposal of unused opioid medications.

CREATING A LASTING TRIBUTE TO A BELOVED WOMAN AND A MEMORY OF PEACE

Even though their home was in South Eastern Massachusetts, when it came time to choose hospice care and an inpatient hospice facility for his wife Judy, Michael Metzler and his family chose Care Dimensions’ Kaplan Family Hospice House in Danvers. “After looking at all of the options Kaplan House was the best choice for my wife and our family,” said Michael. At the age of 69, Judy was battling cancer when she was admitted to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. After two weeks, doctors suggested the family consider hospice care. Judy, a vibrant and independent woman, did not want to die in the hospital but her pain and symptoms required expert care, with 24 hour support. After visiting Care Dimensions’ website and seeing the Kaplan House video tour, the Metzler family was certain that Judy would be most comfortable there.

“I was immediately relieved when we arrived and the staff knew all about Judy – her medication regimen, the symptoms she was experiencing, and the fact that we’d just had our first grandchild,” said Michael.

Looking back on Judy’s stay at Kaplan House, Michael said it was an experience that will influence him and his family for the rest of their lives. “In the hospital, there was constant disruption for vital signs, medication checks and monitors, yet you’re painfully aware that none of these interventions are going to save your loved one,” he said “Once we were at the hospice house, Judy was noticeably more at ease. The quality of the staff and their teamwork, and the beautiful surroundings, created an everlasting memory of peace that will stay with us forever.”

As a tribute to a woman who embodied elegance and grace, Michael made a donation to inscribe a brick in her honor. He also committed to annually support Care Dimensions’ mission so that other families will benefit from our expert care.

“Supporting Care Dimensions is my way of showing my appreciation to Care Dimensions and their staff for taking such wonderful care of Judy and all of us.”

‘DAD’S DREAM TEAM’ LIVES ON AT WALK FOR HOSPICE

Although 81-year-old Tom DeVeau of Wakefield had chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), he had been living a full life with the help of oxygen. He lived in his own home, drove, and cooked meals for himself. At the end of 2016, his symptoms suddenly got much worse and he spent six weeks in and out of Boston-area hospitals.

“We (family members) all knew that he would require more care than he had before he entered the hospital, but the word ‘hospice’ was very frightening to him – and to us. He equated ‘hospice’ with ‘dying,’ but we soon learned that wasn’t the case.” recalled Tom’s daughter, Denise Meehan.

Tom had his first visit with a Care Dimensions hospice nurse case manager and social worker at his home in January 2017, and things clicked immediately. “They were friendly and comforting and gave him the help he needed to stay at home,” said Denise.

“They enrolled him in the Respiratory Program, which provided the specialized care he needed for his COPD. If he wasn’t feeling well, we called Care Dimensions and the nurse was able to treat him at home.”

Last September, Tom and 12 of his family members formed Team DeVeau - Dad’s Dream Team for the Walk for Hospice as a way of giving back in appreciation for the services Tom received. Now that Tom has died, his family will be back at the Walk this year to honor his memory.

In June, the Care Dimensions Board of Directors welcomed community supporters at our 40th Anniversary Gala fundraiser, held at Tedesco Country Club in Marblehead. The event celebrated Care Dimensions’ 40 years of service and raised more than $200,000 in support of our mission to provide exceptional care for patients and families facing life’s most challenging journey. A live auction featured this year’s signature artwork, Sunset in Gloucester Harbor, by Ken Knowles, as well as the beautiful sculpture, Romeo, by Beverly Seamans. The weekend’s festivities continued with the 24th Annual Hospice Regatta, held at the Eastern Yacht Club, followed by a cookout for skippers and crews. We are grateful for our inspiring committee members and the generous and compassionate individuals and businesses who contributed to the success of this event. We extend a special thank you to Nancy and Brian McCarthy for hosting the Gala Kick-Off party in their home in May.

Volunteer focus

OUR VOLUNTEERS IN ACTION
Every day, our hospice volunteers are engaged in a variety of activities that benefit our patients, their caregivers, and our staff.

NEW VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED... HELP US SPREAD THE WORD
Our volunteers play a critical role in the lives of our patients and their caregivers. Each day we care for more patients and we need new volunteers to assist with these growing numbers. If you or someone you know is interested in volunteering or in learning more about these special opportunities, please contact our Volunteer Coordinator, Heather Merrill (Greater Boston area) at HMerrill@CareDimensions.org or Fran Clements (North Shore area) at FClements@CareDimensions.org or call us at 888-283-1722. Visit CareDimensions.org/Volunteers for upcoming training dates and for more information.

VOLUNTEER VOICES
For Jerry Dunn, a widower and Navy veteran, a life-affirming commitment to hospice volunteering began after he participated in a bereavement support group. In the seven years since, Jerry has squeezed in a wide variety of hospice volunteer activities including: making bereavement check-in calls to families, sitting vigil with patients, visiting hospice patients at home or in the community, acting as a volunteer bereavement peer facilitator to co-lead support groups for those who have lost a spouse/partner, and helping train new volunteers. All of these roles are rewarding to Jerry, who told volunteer coordinators to “send me as many patients as you need to, no matter where they are.”

Then in 2016, Jerry attended the veteran volunteer training program and immediately knew that his time and attention would be best focused on serving as a veteran volunteer. “Attending the training was a sea change for me,” he said. “Attending the training was a sea change for me.”

Since then Jerry has been known to have as many as five patients at a time and has become a regular volunteer at the Chelsea Soldiers Home, where several of our patients reside. He attributes his success with veteran patients to the exemplary training he received on both veterans and patients with dementia, and to his military background. “I feel a kinship with these men and women,” he says. “Jerry is creative, determined, and committed to engaging with our patients,” says Volunteer Coordinator Michelle Perry. “He always finds a way to give them just what they need.”

Welcome to our new Senior Staff

Dan O’Neil, Vice President and Chief Information Officer
Signaling the importance of managing data and analytics in today’s evolving health care system, Dan O’Neil joined Care Dimensions as its first chief information officer. Dan will work to leverage technology solutions to help Care Dimensions be more efficient and effective, improve patient and caregiver experiences, and support our growth. He comes to us most recently from Steward Health Care, where he served as the VP of Technology Transformation Services. He was previously senior VP and CIO at Quincy Medical Center, and VP of Enterprise Applications at Caritas Christi Health Care. Dan has a Bachelor of Science degree from the School of Engineering at Tufts University, a Master’s degree in health administration from Framingham State University, and an MBA from Boston College.

Kristine DiFiore, Vice President and Chief Human Resources Officer
Kristine DiFiore, SHRM-CP, PHR, joined Care Dimensions as our new vice president and chief human resources officer. Kristine is responsible for the operational and strategic initiatives of Care Dimensions’ human resources and volunteer functions. With more than 15 years of human resources leadership experience, Kristine most recently served as VP of human resources for Home Health Foundation in Lawrence. A graduate of Worcester State University, Kristine is certified as a Professional in Human Resources (PHR) and serves as program director for the HR State Council of New Hampshire.

Theresa Petrie, Clinical Director of Palliative Care
Theresa Petrie, RN, BSN, has joined Care Dimensions in the newly created role of clinical director of Palliative Care, focused on expanding the program to ensure that people with serious illness are introduced to palliative care as early as possible. Theresa has more than 25 years of healthcare and nursing experience and has worked previously in the oncology units of Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital and Lowell General Hospital. She spent many years working in health care management with the Home Health Foundation in Lawrence, where she rose to the position of Vice President. Theresa is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire, and received her Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Salem State University.

PARTNERING TOGETHER TO ENSURE EARLIER END-OF-LIFE CONVERSATIONS
In May, Care Dimensions VP and Chief Medical Officer Stephanie Patel, MD, and Director of Research Susan Lysaght-Hurley, NP, were interviewed by WBUR (90.9 FM) healthcare reporter Martha Bebinger about the initial results reported from our Palliative Care+ project. The Palliative Care+ Program is an innovative 18-month collaborative research program between Care Dimensions and North Shore Physicians Group, funded by a $750,000 grant from the Massachusetts Health Policy Commission. The project is looking at the effects of embedding palliative care in the primary care practice to encourage earlier advance care directive conversations and consultations from our palliative care team. In addition to a comprehensive assessment from a Care Dimensions nurse practitioner, patients on the program also receive telephone support from a nurse coach. Telehealth monitoring is also available for patients with advanced cardiac and respiratory diseases. Early results support the goal of the study to prove that earlier palliative care intervention reduces unwanted MD office visits, ER visits and hospitalizations, thereby improving patient quality of life and reducing costs. Read the story and listen to the broadcast at CareDimensions.org/WBUR.

EXPANDING OUR REACH AND VISIBILITY
Care Dimensions has embarked on a new way to expand our exposure and educate communities about our many services and hospice care through sponsored articles produced by the Boston Globe and posted on BostonGlobe.com. The first article in the three-part series focused on Care Dimensions’ rich 40-year history of caring for patients at end of life and shared how Care Dimensions is redefining what hospice means. Read the full article at CareDimensions.org/BostonGlobe.
We'd like to keep you informed, however, if you no longer wish to receive this newsletter or future fundraising requests to support Care Dimensions, formerly Hospice of the North Shore & Greater Boston, please contact the Development Department by email at Philanthropy@CareDimensions.org or call 978-223-9787.
